

GIR INSIGHT

ASIA-PACIFIC
INVESTIGATIONS REVIEW
2021

ASIA-PACIFIC INVESTIGATIONS REVIEW 2021

Reproduced with permission from Law Business Research Ltd
This article was first published in September 2020
For further information please contact Natalie.Clarke@lbresearch.com

LAW BUSINESS RESEARCH

Published in the United Kingdom
by Global Investigations Review
Law Business Research Ltd
Meridian House, 34-35 Farringdon Street, London, EC4A 4HL
© 2020 Law Business Research Ltd
www.globalinvestigationsreview.com

To subscribe please contact subscriptions@globalinvestigationsreview.com

No photocopying: copyright licences do not apply.

The information provided in this publication is general and may not apply in a specific situation. Legal advice should always be sought before taking any legal action based on the information provided. This information is not intended to create, nor does receipt of it constitute, a lawyer–client relationship. The publishers and authors accept no responsibility for any acts or omissions contained herein. Although the information provided is accurate as at August 2020, be advised that this is a developing area.

Enquiries concerning reproduction should be sent to Law Business Research, at the address above. Enquiries concerning editorial content should be directed to the Publisher – david.samuels@lawbusinessresearch.com

© 2020 Law Business Research Limited

ISBN: 978-1-83862-268-8

Printed and distributed by Encompass Print Solutions
Tel: 0844 2480 112

Contents

Cross-border overviews

Forensic Accounting in Cross-border Investigations.....1

Colum Bancroft, Edward Boyle and Takahiro Yamada

AlixPartners

Strengthening Supply Chains amid Trade Wars 11

Frances McLeod, Drew Costello and Weng Yee Ng

Forensic Risk Alliance

The Long Arm of Law Enforcement 27

Kyle Wombolt and Jeremy Birch

Herbert Smith Freehills

Country articles

Australia: An Increasingly Global Approach 42

Dennis Miralis and Phillip Gibson

Nyman Gibson Miralis

Australia: Handling Internal Investigations 58

Natalie Caton, Jonathon Ellis and Gowri Kangeson

DLA Piper

China: A New Normal amid Rising Trade Tensions 71

Dora W Wang, Michael Lowell, Peter Witherington and Jessica Tian

Reed Smith

Hong Kong: Email Fraud and the Con Game in Business.....83

Maria Sit, Hadrian Ho, Fei Kwok and Natasha Shum

Dechert

Contents

India..... 97
Aditya Vikram Bhat and Prerak Ved
AZB & Partners

Singapore: Handling Financial Services Investigations..... 109
Joy Tan and Koh Swee Yen
WongPartnership LLP

Preface

Welcome to the Asia-Pacific Investigations Review 2021, a Global Investigations Review special report. Global Investigations Review is the online home for all those who specialise in investigating and resolving suspected corporate wrongdoing, telling them all they need to know about everything that matters.

Throughout the year, the GIR editorial team delivers daily news, surveys and features; organises the liveliest events (GIR Live), covid-19 allowing; and provides our readers with innovative tools and know-how products. In addition, assisted by external contributors, we curate a range of comprehensive regional reviews – online and in print – that go deeper into developments than the exigencies of journalism allow.

The Asia-Pacific Investigations Review 2021, which you are reading, is part of that series. It contains insight and thought leadership from 25 pre-eminent practitioners from the region. Across nine chapters and 130 pages, it provides a blend of invaluable retrospective, handy primer and crystal ball. All our contributors are vetted for their standing and knowledge before being invited to take part.

Together, these contributors capture and interpret the most substantial recent international investigations developments from the past year, complete with footnotes and relevant statistics. Elsewhere, they focus on a particular topic so you can get up to speed quickly.

This edition covers Australia, China, Hong Kong, India and Singapore in detail; has a pair of overviews pertinent to 2020 (how to reorient supply chains safely and on the particular dangers that these strange times may make manifest); and a third on the evidence-gathering powers of enforcers who want material located outside their jurisdiction.

Among the gems that a close reading will yield is a chart showing the correlation between stock market drops and the discovery of fraud; a review of what foreign courts have said on China's blocking statute; a full taxonomy of Australia's enforcement agencies and how they have reacted to a governmental edict to internationalise; signs that Australia's enforcers are shifting on internal investigation interview notes – they may expect to see copies in the future; the effect of US–China trade tension on enforcers in both countries (they are much more on edge); a helpful road map for responding to email fraud; and much, much more.

If you have any suggestions for future editions, or want to take part in this annual project, we would love to hear from you.

Please write to insight@globalinvestigationsreview.com.

Global Investigations Review

London

August 2020

Australia: An Increasingly Global Approach

Dennis Miralis and Phillip Gibson

Nyman Gibson Miralis

In summary

This article considers the major Australian government investigation and law enforcement agencies involved in domestic and transnational investigations, with a particular focus on their increasing need to adopt a global approach to adequately protect Australians from criminal threats, both local and international. The article explains the new international mindset of Australian law enforcement, the effect of globalisation and the increased level of international collaboration between government agencies, as well as the tools and techniques utilised by such agencies to address the increased complexity and 'borderless' nature of investigations.

Discussion points

- Background to the change in approach
- The Australian government's role in driving international coordination globally and in the Asia-Pacific region
- Steps individual agencies are taking individually and collaboratively to investigate and achieve enforcement outcomes

Referenced in this article

- National Strategy to Fight Transnational, Serious and Organised Crime
- Australian Federal Police
- The Asia/Pacific Group on Money Laundering
- Australian Transaction Reports and Analysis Centre
- Australian Criminal Intelligence Commission
- Australian Securities and Investments Commission
- Australian Competition and Consumer Commission
- The Department of Home Affairs
- The Australian Tax Office
- The Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters Act

Traditionally, Australian government investigations were focused on individuals and corporations operating within Australia's geographical borders. Globalisation, however, has led to Australian government agencies being increasingly involved in cross-border investigations, often working collaboratively with their international counterparts in parallel investigations. One of the main drivers behind this change has been the internationalisation of commerce and the subsequent increase in 'borderless crimes' such as money laundering, tax evasion, e-commerce fraud, corruption, bribery, cybercrime and terrorism financing.

This chapter surveys the major Australian government agencies involved in such investigations, with a particular focus on their increasing need to adopt a global approach to adequately protect Australians from criminal threats, both local and international.

National Strategy to Fight Transnational, Serious and Organised Crime

On 13 December 2018, the Minister for Home Affairs announced the launch of the National Strategy to Fight Transnational, Serious and Organised Crime (TSOC), an agreement signed by the Council of Australian Governments on 12 December 2018. Building on the insights of the 2017 Australian Foreign Policy White Paper, the National Strategy to fight TSOC is a collaborative government response to the damage caused to Australian citizens by transnational crime typologies, such as the trade of illicit drugs, money laundering, cybercrime and child sexual exploitation.

Such examples of serious criminal typologies are generally perpetrated by sophisticated and well-resourced criminal groups. The Australian government has responded by increasing development of existing law enforcement capabilities onshore and abroad. In addition to the development of existing Australian law enforcement agencies, the National TSOC strategy promotes an increased level of inter-agency collaboration.

The initiative represents an integrated and formalised national framework to combat TSOC and guide commonwealth and state governments.

Key partnerships and initiatives include:

- international engagement: cooperation with a range of international partners to disrupt crime at its source overseas;
- government engagement: building partnerships across governments, domestically and internationally, to enhance collaborative relationships across intelligence, law enforcement, border management, justice, legal, education, health and social policy agencies, to ensure a multifaceted response to the threat;
- private sector, civil society and academic engagement: this will help to build a strong understanding of the threat environment, raise awareness, promote vigilance and reinforce the fight against TSOC; and
- community engagement: increasing resilience of communities and protecting vulnerable individuals.

The Commonwealth TSOC Coordinator, Deputy Commissioner Karl Kent OAM, has been tasked with the implementation of the Strategy.

The Australian Federal Police

The Australian Federal Police (AFP) is Australia's national law enforcement policing body, tasked with enforcing the Commonwealth criminal law, which includes the offences of foreign bribery, cybercrime, tax evasion, terrorism financing and money laundering.

The AFP states that the purpose of its international engagement is 'to take the fight against crime offshore, and to protect Australians and Australia's national interests by working in partnership with state, territory and foreign law enforcement agencies to detect, deter, prevent and disrupt crime at its point of origin or transit'. This represents a significant shift in the AFP's approach.

According to the report, the following statistics reflect the need for the AFP to engage with international law enforcement agencies:

- around 70 per cent of Australia's serious criminal targets live or have links to overseas; fraud is said to cost Australia more than A$6 billion each year;
- cybercrime costs more than A$2 billion annually, and with changing technologies and automation this will only increase; the global cost of crime is about A$3 trillion, and this will continue to grow; and
- there has been a 120 per cent increase in terrorism incidents globally since 2010.

In accordance with this new approach, the AFP works with global law enforcement and intelligence partners such as INTERPOL and Five Eyes, as well as global non-law enforcement such as the UN and foreign governments, to further their investigations where Australian interests are affected.

The AFP: its global investigative footprint and internationalist policy

Additionally, the AFP has strategically placed liaison officers, police advisers and missions in five regions across the globe, each with a regional manager. The regional managers are responsible for overseeing and providing strategic leadership and guidance for senior liaison officers and advisers and implementing region-wide law enforcement areas of emphasis and responsibility. The posts in each region have responsibility for a number of countries within that region.

According to the AFP, the international operations portfolio assists the AFP in the disruption of crime offshore through: disruption of transnational serious and organised crime (including terrorism); security and stabilisation missions to achieve regional stability and contribute to global order; international engagement and liaison; and capability development missions and activities.

The AFP now has over 300 personnel located in more than 52 locations throughout the regional areas of Asia, South East Asia, the Americas, Europe, the Middle East and Africa, and the Pacific catchment.

The AFP describes its increasing internationalist approach to investigations by referencing the following three principles:

- collaboration: brokering collaboration with international law enforcement agencies to drive investigations and support bilateral or multilateral cooperation;

- intelligence gathering: collecting and exchanging criminal intelligence in support of international law enforcement efforts; and
- capacity building: enhancing the capacity and the capability of international law enforcement agencies to combat transnational crime.

Conforming with this approach, in 2015, the AFP and FBI signed a memorandum of understanding (MOU) that focuses on the collaboration between the two agencies in addressing terrorism, illicit drugs, money laundering, illegal firearms trafficking, identity crime, cybercrime and transnational economic crime.

The MOU, called 'Combating Transnational Crime, Combating Terrorism and Developing Law Enforcement Cooperation', consolidates the AFP and Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) cooperation in the exchange of information, resources, and technical and forensic capabilities.

The AFP has signed similar memorandums with many other countries, and additionally relies on Europol and INTERPOL for assistance with its investigations.

AUSTRAC and the Asia-Pacific Group on Money Laundering

AUSTRAC is Australia's anti-money laundering (AML) and counter-terrorism financing (CTF) regulator, and the specialist financial intelligence unit (FIU) responsible for identifying threats and criminal abuses in the financial system. AUSTRAC's powers are set out in the Anti-Money Laundering and Counter-Terrorism Financing Act 2006 (Cth) and the Financial Transactions Reports Act 1988 (Cth).

As AUSTRAC primarily receives and analyses financial information, the resulting financial intelligence is disseminated to revenue, law enforcement, national security, human services, regulatory and other partner agencies in Australia and overseas.

By identifying potential money laundering and terrorism money laundering cases, AUSTRAC plays a vital role in helping partner agencies to detect money laundering and terrorism-financing activity, investigation of financial crimes (including tax evasion) and securing prosecutions. This supports national priorities to protect Australia's security, apprehend criminals, protect the integrity of Australia's financial markets and maximise revenue collection.

AUSTRAC recognises that the transnational nature of money laundering and terrorism financing requires a coordinated global response and therefore engages in a two-way exchange of information and intelligence with other FIUs all over the world. The information shared relates to financial transactions, financial intelligence, AML\CTF, and general AML\CTF issues and statistics. The benefits of exchanging information by these means is that it assists international counterparts with their AML\CTF regulation, while also helping law enforcement agencies track the international movements of proceeds of crime.

MOUs are presently in place between AUSTRAC and 93 equivalent national FIUs. This includes successful agreements signed with prominent regional partners, such as the China Anti-Money Laundering Monitoring and Analysis Centre on 2 November 2016 and the United States counterpart, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network on 27 September 2018.

The most basic requirement for the dissemination of information to international partners is for the CEO of AUSTRAC to be satisfied, in accordance with section 132 of the Anti-Money Laundering and Counter-Terrorism Financing Act 2006 (Cth), that:

- the foreign government requesting the information has provided requisite undertakings as set out in section 132(1)(a) of the Act; and
- it is appropriate to release the information in all the circumstances.

AUSTRAC also works in conjunction with the following:

- The Financial Action Task Force (FATF) – an intergovernmental body focused on fighting money laundering, terrorism financing and other related threats to the integrity of the international financial system. On 4 May 2020, the FATF released the ‘COVID-19 related Money Laundering and Terrorism Financing: Risks and Policy Responses’ report, detailing the emerging threats of covid-19 crime typologies and best practices and policy responses for governments addressing vulnerabilities arising from the global pandemic.
- The Egmont Group of Financial Intelligence Units – made up of FIUs and providing a global network for enhancing cooperation among FIUs, especially in the areas of information exchange, training and the sharing of knowledge and expertise. Beyond AUSTRAC, notable Asia-Pacific (APAC) members include:
 - Hong Kong SAR, China Joint Financial Intelligence Unit;
 - Indonesian Financial Transaction Reports and Analysis Centre (PPATK); and
 - Anti-Money Laundering Office Thailand;
- The Asia/Pacific Group on Money Laundering (APG) – the FATF-style regional body for the Asia-Pacific region.

The APG consists of 41 member jurisdictions, 11 of which are also permanent members of the FATF. These core members are Australia, China, Hong Kong, the United States, Canada, Japan, Korea, Singapore, Malaysia, India and New Zealand. All members of the APG commit to implementing the international standards against money laundering set out in the recommendations of the FATF. The APG mutual evaluations or ‘peers review’ process involves site visits conducted by rotating teams consisting of APG legal, financial and law enforcement experts. These teams attend upon the jurisdiction of fellow APG members for the purpose of testing their levels of technical compliance with AML standards, as set by the FATF, as well as AMF/CTF effectiveness. In addition to the mutual evaluation attendance on Vietnam in November 2019, the APG has recently commenced evaluations of Japan and Korea (jointly with the FATF) as well as Tonga.

Australia is a permanent APG co-chair. The chair position is currently held by Deputy Commissioner Ian McCartney of the AFP. The current rotating chair is Bangladesh, whose chair is held by Abu Hena Mohammad Razeen Hassan, head of the Bangladesh Financial Intelligence Unit. The secretariat offices of the APG are located in Sydney, Australia.

Commonly, AUSTRAC will liaise with international law enforcement bodies and agencies regarding the traceability of proceeds of crime. AUSTRAC also provides extensive technical assistance and training programmes throughout the APAC region to strengthen the effectiveness of counterpart FIUs. Formal training programmes focused on capability building have been administered in Thailand, Nepal, Indonesia, Bangladesh, Cambodia, the Philippines and Papua New Guinea.

Of particular concern to international law enforcement is the proliferation of Bitcoin and other cryptocurrency transactions, which are widely considered to be used for illegal purposes. The anonymity that exists in the cryptocurrency realm is what makes it difficult for law enforcement agencies to identify and track users.

In responding to this problem, the Australian government has passed the Anti-Money Laundering and Counter-Terrorism Financing Amendment Bill 2017. The amendments took effect on 3 April 2018. Australia's legislative amendments follow comparable recent regulatory action on the part of the Hong Kong Regulatory Authority, Bank of Negara Malaysia and the Monetary Authority of Singapore.

Under the legislative amendments, AUSTRAC now monitors all digital currency exchanges within Australia's borders with the aim of ensuring that the transactions are not being used for money laundering or terrorism-related activities. AUSTRAC will do this by requiring all digital currency exchange providers operating in Australia to register with AUSTRAC and meet the Australian government's AML/CTF obligations. Digital currency exchange providers will have to collect information to establish a customer's identity, monitor transactional activity, and report to AUSTRAC transactions or activity that is suspicious or involves amounts of cash over A$10,000. As a result of the legislative amendments, digital currencies are treated in the same way as physical cash in a bank with regard to money laundering and activities suspected to be linked to terrorism financing.

Any company caught operating an unregistered digital exchange will be held criminally liable. The penalties start at a two-year jail term or a fine of A$105,000 for failure to register, and range up to seven years in jail; and, for more serious offences, a A$2.1 million fine for corporations or a A$420,000 fine for individuals. The introduction of these new regulations will enhance the abilities of the Australian government to more comprehensively investigate emerging crimes such as money laundering through the use of cryptocurrency, as well as cybercrime, on an international scale.

The Australian Criminal Intelligence Commission

The Australian Criminal Intelligence Commission (ACIC) is Australia's national criminal intelligence agency with 'specialist investigative capabilities'. The ACIC is the only agency in Australia that is exclusively focused on combating serious and organised crime.

The ACIC's remit for 'specialist investigative capabilities' involves:

- collecting criminal intelligence from partner agencies and combining it to create a comprehensive national database;
- using coercive powers (similar to a Royal Commission) to obtain information where traditional law enforcement methods have not been effective;
- acquiring strategic intelligence products to support in decision-making, strategic targeting and policy development; and

- implementing a national target management framework to guide law enforcement in establishing and sharing organised crime priorities and targets. This is particularly useful for dealing with multi-jurisdictional serious and organised crime investigations.

The Australian Security and Investments Commission

The Australian Security and Investments Commission (ASIC) exercises its powers under the Australian Securities and Investments Commission Act 2001 (Cth) (ASIC Act) to regulate many aspects of Australia's corporate, market and financial sectors. ASIC possesses the discretion to investigate potential breaches of law committed by the financial entities within its oversight. However, before initiating a formal investigation, ASIC must first undertake a consideration of multiple factors. If a matter falls within ASIC's regulatory responsibility, it will be assessed to determine whether a formal investigation should be held. This includes consideration of the harm suffered by consumers, potential benefits of pursuing the misconduct in contrast with the expense, level of misconduct available on the evidence and any alternative courses of action, such as surveillance.

While primarily responsible for regulating Australia's corporate, market and financial sectors, the nature of the modern global economy requires ASIC to work internationally with foreign agencies, as many Australian financial market participants undertake cross-border transactions.

ASIC and other international regulators cooperate by sharing information to assist each other with the supervision of markets and enforcement of regulation. This is done in accordance with the MOU ASIC has with other regulators, the International Organization of Securities Commission's Multilateral Memorandum of Understanding and staff secondments with fellow members of the International Organization of Securities Commissions (IOSCO).

ASIC also works closely with a range of international organisations, foreign regulators and law enforcement agencies, and makes and receives international requests in relation to investigations, compliance and surveillance, policy research, delegations, licensing, due diligence and general referrals.

Furthermore, ASIC participates in a number of important international regulatory forums, including IOSCO, and is a signatory to international cooperation agreements, including the IOSCO Multilateral Memorandum of Understanding (MMOU) and numerous bilateral MOUs.

Many international organisations and foreign regulators make requests for assistance under international cooperation agreements, including the IOSCO MMOU and other bilateral MOUs. Where authorised, ASIC uses the Mutual Assistance in Business Regulation Act 1992 to exercise compulsory powers to obtain documents, information or testimony on behalf of foreign regulators.

The MMOU sets an international benchmark for cross-border cooperation. Established in 2002, it has provided securities regulators with the tools for combating cross-border fraud and misconduct that can weaken global markets and undermine investor confidence. The MMOU represents a common understanding among its signatories of how they should consult, cooperate and exchange information for the purpose of regulatory enforcement regarding securities markets. Information requests can be made when authorities are in the process of investigating offences relating to the following activities under the relevant laws and regulations of the jurisdictions in question:

- insider dealing and market manipulation;
- misrepresentation of material information and other fraudulent or manipulative practices relating to securities;
- derivatives, the solicitation and handling of investor funds and customer orders; and
- the registration, issuance, offer or sale of securities and derivatives.

The Australian Competition and Consumer Commission

The Australian Competition and Consumer Commission (ACCC) is an independent commonwealth statutory authority whose principal role is to enforce the Competition and Consumer Act 2010 (Cth), (C&C Act). Most of the ACCC's enforcement work is conducted under the provisions of the C&C Act.

Similar to many regulators, the ACCC uses a range of compliance tools to prevent breaches of the Act, including business and consumer education, and working closely with stakeholders and other agencies. However, the Act also provides the ACCC with a range of enforcement remedies, including court-based outcomes and court-enforceable undertakings.

In addition to this, the ACCC has increasing international capabilities to assist it with its investigations, including MOUs and treaties with multiple countries for the exchange of information in cross-border investigations, particularly with respect to cartel conduct and consumer scams and frauds. The ACCC has stated its objectives for its international remit in the following terms:

- assist with cross-border investigations and build the necessary international relationships and processes to promote this cooperation;
- enhance the skill set of its staff by building partnerships with international counterpart agencies to share and develop knowledge; and
- assist other countries, particularly in the Asia-Pacific region, to build effective competition and consumer protection systems and appropriate frameworks for economic regulation.

The ACCC is accordingly part of the International Competition Network, the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation, the Seoul Competition Forum, and the International Consumer Protection and Enforcement Network (ICPEN), which is an informal network established to encourage international cooperation among agencies and the sharing of information about cross-border commercial activities that may affect consumer interests.

The ACCC is also part of a global effort of 34 nations to better combat e-commerce issues faced by consumers, including online scams. This is an initiative launched in the United Kingdom by ICPEN to help law enforcement authorities, including the ACCC, gather and share cross-border consumer complaints that can be used to investigate and take action against legitimate and illegitimate businesses engaged in e-commerce, particularly online scammers.

The ACCC also has extensive powers to investigate international cartels and may:

- compel any person or company to provide information about a suspected breach of the law, including providing documents or giving verbal evidence;

- seek search warrants from a magistrate and execute these on company offices and the premises of company officers; or
- notify the AFP, which in certain circumstances collects evidence using phone taps and other surveillance devices.

On 15 August 2014, the ACCC and the Commonwealth Director of Public Prosecutions (CDPP) signed an MOU regarding serious cartel conduct. The ACCC is responsible for investigating cartel conduct, managing the immunity process and referral of serious cartel conduct to the CDPP for consideration for prosecution. The CDPP is responsible for prosecuting offences against commonwealth law, including serious cartel offences, in accordance with the Prosecution Policy of the Commonwealth.

Recent successful prosecutions for cartel conduct and collusion offences under the C&C Act demonstrate an increased appetite on the part of the ACCC to commence criminal proceedings against companies operating in Australia, as well as a trend of increasing financial penalties imposed by the courts in response to this corporate offending typology.

The Department of Home Affairs

The Department of Home Affairs (the Department) was established on 20 December 2017. The creation of the Department was in response to a government review of Australia's intelligence operations. The Department incorporated the former Department of Immigration and Border Protection. It also subsumed, from the Attorney-General's Department, critical areas of national security, emergency management and criminal justice functions. Critically, the Department also assumed responsibilities of key Australian agencies, including the Australian Security Intelligence Organisation (ASIO), the Australian Federal Police, the Australian Border Force, the Australian Criminal Intelligence Commission and AUSTRAC.

The Department of Home Affairs's primary function is to provide coordinated strategic and policy leadership for Australia's national security policy and operations. This includes coordinating Australia's counterterrorism policies with overseas agencies and coordinating with overseas agencies in relation to potential cybercrime and cyberthreats. The Department also has a portfolio that focuses on immigration and migration policies, including border security, entry, stay and departure arrangements for non-citizens, and customs and border control (apart from quarantine and inspection).

The Australian Tax Office

The Australian Tax Office (ATO) is a government statutory agency and the principal revenue collection body for the Australian government. The ATO is responsible for administering the Australian federal taxation system, superannuation legislation and other associated matters. It conducts its own investigations and also works closely with partner agencies both domestically and abroad. When the ATO decides to bring a criminal prosecution, it is generally the CDPP that conducts the proceedings.

According to the ATO, revenue collection agencies around the world are increasingly sharing intelligence and expertise in financial investigations to fight tax evasion and organised tax crime. Australia's network of more than 100 information-sharing agreements enabled the ATO to raise assessments valued around A$530 million in the 2017–2018 financial year.

Income concealed offshore, poor transparency of offshore activities and practical difficulties associated with obtaining information about a taxpayer's offshore activities all present risks for the international tax system.

To address these, the ATO states that it works with governments and organisations around the world to fight tax evasion and crime on a global scale through accessing information and resources from private and government sources, participating in information sharing, intelligence gathering, analytics, investigations and audits with international tax administrations, using Australia's bilateral tax treaties and the multilateral convention on mutual administrative assistance in tax matters, working with domestic partner agencies through the Serious Financial Crime Taskforce, entering into information exchange agreements and obtaining information from countries previously regarded as secrecy jurisdictions, as well as working with AUSTRAC, which possesses an enhanced capability to detect, monitor and report international transactions.

Additionally, the ATO collaborates with international revenue agencies bilaterally, and through groups and forums, for example:

- The OECD brings together more than 30 governments from across the globe and where the ATO participates in the Taskforce on Tax Crimes and Other Crimes, including money laundering and bribery, by sharing experiences and examining specific tax and crime risks.
- The Global Forum was originally established in 2001 by OECD and non-OECD countries to tackle the use of secrecy jurisdictions. The forum's primary focus is to exchange information and to develop the international standard of transparency. The forum now includes 122 members, making it the largest tax group in the world.
- The Joint International Taskforce on Shared Intelligence and Collaboration (JITSIC) network brings together 30 of the world's national tax administrations to find ways to more effectively deal with tax avoidance. The JITSIC network offers a platform that enables its members to actively collaborate within the legal framework of effective bilateral and multilateral conventions and tax information exchange agreements – sharing their experience, resources and expertise to tackle risks and issues that affect member nations.

The ATO also works with other government agencies, Australian law enforcement, industry and overseas counterparts to share data, intelligence and expertise in the fight against tax crime. Some organisations (such as banks, employers, health insurers and other government agencies) have a legal obligation to report information to be used for taxation purposes. This is known as legislated tax collection.

The ATO exchanges information with its international treaty partners to ensure correct reporting of income earned overseas by Australian residents and income earned in Australia by foreign residents and also works with governments and organisations around the world to fight tax evasion on a global scale. Australia has a network of international treaties and information exchange agreements with over 100 jurisdictions.

Further examples of inter-agency collaboration in the APAC region

The above Australian law enforcement, investigative and prosecution agencies collaborate under formal partnerships and specialised taskforces as well as on an informal basis.

Similarly, these agencies operate collaboratively with APAC partners to investigate and prosecute transnational crime adverse to our national interests.

Organised Crime and Counter-Terrorism Practice Group

The Organised Crime and Counter-Terrorism Practice Group (the Practice Group) of the CDDP is responsible for Commonwealth prosecutions for activity of terrorism, nationally security and significant organised crime offending. Such criminal typologies often involve prosecutions that are comparatively complex and resource-intensive. Cases referred to the Practice Group involve activity that often takes place wholly or partly outside the geographical boundaries of Australia, requiring international cooperation to secure foreign evidence to enable prosecution of international organised crime and terrorism.

The Practice Group works with numerous partner agencies to exchange evidence to facilitate prosecutions. There is a focus on electronic evidence, which is easier to manage, enabling more efficient searching and collating of relevant evidence.

Key domestic partner agencies include the following:

- the AFP;
- the ASIO;
- the Australian Border Force;
- the ACIC; and
- the state and territory police.

International agencies involved in recent engagements include the FBI, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, United Nations Counter-Terrorism Committee, as well as South Asian judges, prosecutors and police officers.

The Serious Financial Crime Taskforce

Created on 1 July 2015 and operating under the AFP-run Fraud and Anti-Corruption Centre, the Serious Financial Crime Taskforce (SFCT) is a domestic multi-agency taskforce specifically formulated to combine the investigative powers, operational intelligence and capabilities of Australia's largest law enforcement bodies.

The SFCT was established to bring together the knowledge, resources and experiences of federal law enforcement and regulatory agencies to identify and address serious and complex financial crimes. The SFCT targets activities that occur both within Australia and in foreign jurisdictions. It works closely with international partner agencies, both law enforcement and regulators, governments and organisations across the globe, including countries that are subject to Australia's bilateral tax treaties and tax exchange agreements. The main operational focus of the task force is abusive use of secrecy jurisdictions, trust fraud and international tax evasion fraud.

As of 31 December 2019, the SFCT led investigations leading to six sentence proceedings, A$928 million in raised tax liabilities and recouping A$338 million in proceeds of crime.

The SFCT includes the following:

- the AFP;
- the ATO;
- the ACIC;
- the Attorney-General's Department;
- AUSTRAC;
- ASIC;
- CDPP; and
- the Australian Border Force.

Pacific Transnational Crime Network

The Pacific Transnational Crime Network (PTCN) represents an international police services-led criminal intelligence and investigation capability that operates under the governance of the Pacific Islands Chiefs of Police (PICP) network. Developed in 2002 to combat transnational crime in the Pacific, the PTCN presently consists of 25 domestic and foreign law enforcement bodies from 17 Pacific Island countries.

Prominent members include the following:

- Australia (AFP);
- New Zealand (New Zealand Police);
- Fiji (Fiji Police Force);
- Samoa (Samoa Police Service);
- Tonga (Tonga Police); and
- Solomon Islands (Royal Solomon Islands Police Force).

The express purpose of the PTCN and the PICP is to build policing leadership in the Pacific region and collectively navigate regional policing challenges through discovery, knowledge, influence and partnerships.

The PTCN operates under three governing documents that dictate the strategic role of the network as well as the roles and responsibilities of each member. The documents are:

- a memorandum of agreement between the Chair of Pacific Island Chief of Police and Chair PTCN Executive Leadership Team supporting the continuation of the PTCN;
- an exchange of letters between the Chair of PTCN Executive Leadership Team and AFP regarding funding arrangements; and
- the MOU between the Chair of the PTCN Executive Leadership Team and the government of Samoa to house the Pacific Transnational Crime Coordination Centre.

The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime in the APAC region

The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) operates a regional programme in South East Asia that provides strategic oversight for member states to combat transnational organised crime and illicit trafficking in the region by way of:

- giving clear focus to supporting member states and regional partners in achieving priority crime and drug outcomes in the region; and
- increasing the responsiveness, efficiency and effectiveness of UNODC's support to the region.

The UNODC South East Asia regional programme is constituted to address transnational organised crime and illicit trafficking, corruption and terrorism threats in the region.

The Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters Act

In addition to informal agreements and MOUs between Australian government agencies and their international counterparts, the Australian government can also rely on the Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters Act 1987 (Cth) (the Mutual Assistance Act), which provides formal mechanisms for the provision of and receiving of international assistance in criminal matters. Bilateral treaties governing the means by which mutual assistance can be provided are legislated by way of Regulations under the Mutual Assistance Act.

The Mutual Assistance Act provides an express diplomatic channel by which foreign law enforcement agencies may request the assistance of the Australian government and Australian law enforcement agencies. Bilateral treaties are presently in place governing mutual assistance between Australia and the following APAC jurisdictions: Canada, China, Hong Kong, India, Indonesia, South Korea, Malaysia, the Philippines and Thailand.

Australian investigative, prosecution and law enforcement bodies collaborate with APAC partners both formally and informally in relation to transnational investigations. Requests for assistance include the exercise of powers of search and seizure and the taking of evidence in the form of oral evidence or written statements. All assistance provided must be in accordance with domestic laws, and contracting member states have the ability to refuse requests for assistance.

As disclosed in the CDPP's Annual Report for 1 July 2018 to 30 June 2019, the CDPP was responsible for drafting 62 separate assistance requests to 25 separate foreign governments over the 2018–2019 reporting period.

The Mutual Assistance framework does not represent an exhaustive regime for inter-government requests for assistance and cooperation. To this end, the Mutual Assistance Act does not 'cover the field' by which the Australian government can assist a foreign government and the law enforcement agencies operating under its jurisdiction.

Countries that are not signatories to mutual assistance treaties may also request assistance that is assessed case by case by the receiving government or law enforcement agency.

Australia and a number of separate APAC governments are also ratified members to multi-lateral conventions, including the following:

- the Convention of 15 November 1965 on the Service Abroad of Judicial and Extrajudicial Documents in Civil or Commercial Matters;
- the Convention of 18 March 1970 on the Taking of Evidence Abroad in Civil or Commercial Matters;
- the United Nations Convention against Illicit Traffic in Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances; and
- the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organised Crime.

The Extradition Act

The Extradition Act 1988 (Cth) (Extradition Act) provides Australia's legislative basis for extradition. Extradition involves a person in a foreign jurisdiction being lawfully transferred to the jurisdiction of a requesting state to serve a sentence or face prosecution. The Extradition Act stipulates the thresholds and standards that must be met before the Australian government can make or accept a request for extradition. It sets out a number of mandatory requirements that must be met before Australia can make or accept an extradition request.

Comparable to the mutual assistance regime, the Extradition Act is the legislative basis under which numerous bilateral treaties are enacted into Australian domestic law.

Australia has bilateral extradition relationships with the following APAC jurisdictions: Hong Kong, India, Indonesia, South Korea, Malaysia, the United States and Vietnam.

As disclosed in the CDPP's Annual Report for 1 July 2018 to 30 June 2019, three people were surrendered to Australia during the 2018–19 period and a further 14 extradition requests remain ongoing, including one request to New Zealand.

Conclusion

Government investigations in Australia are becoming more complex and international in response to increased globalisation. Australian government agencies and regulators have therefore sought to respond by forming formal and informal collaborations with their international counterparts to enable them to conduct investigations across the globe.

Dennis Miralis
Nyman Gibson Miralis

Dennis Miralis is a leading Australian defence lawyer who acts and advises in complex domestic and international criminal law matters in the following areas: white-collar and corporate crime; money laundering; serious fraud; cybercrime; international asset forfeiture; international proceeds of crime law; bribery and corruption law; transnational crime law; extradition law; mutual assistance in criminal law matters; anti-terrorism law; national security law; criminal intelligence law; and encryption law.

He appears in all courts throughout Australia and regularly travels outside of Australia for complex international and transnational criminal law matters.

Phillip Gibson
Nyman Gibson Miralis

Phillip Gibson is one of Australia's leading criminal defence lawyers, with over 30 years of experience in all areas of criminal law.

Phillip manages and advises on the most complex criminal cases. In the areas of traditional crime, Phillip has acted in many serious drug matters and high-profile murder trials.

Phillip has vast experience in transnational cases across multiple jurisdictions often involving: assets forfeiture; money laundering and proceeds of crime; cybercrime; extradition; mutual assistance; white-collar crime; Royal Commissions; bribery and corruption; INTERPOL notices; international and national security law; and ICAC and Crime Commission matters.

Nyman Gibson Miralis

Nyman Gibson Miralis is an international award-winning criminal defence law firm based in Sydney, Australia. For over 50 years it has been leading the market in all aspects of general, complex and international crime, and is widely recognised for its involvement in some of Australia's most significant criminal cases.

Our international law practice focuses on white-collar and corporate crime, transnational financial crime, bribery and corruption, international money laundering, cybercrime, international asset freezing or forfeiture, extradition and mutual assistance law.

Nyman Gibson Miralis strategically advises and appears in matters where transnational cross-border investigations and prosecutions are being conducted in parallel jurisdictions, involving some of the largest law enforcement agencies and financial regulators worldwide.

Working with international partners, we have advised and acted in investigations involving the United States, Canada, the United Kingdom, the European Union, China, Hong Kong, Singapore, Taiwan, Macao, Vietnam, Cambodia, Russia, Mexico, South Korea, British Virgin Islands, New Zealand and South Africa.

Level 9
299 Elizabeth Street
Sydney NSW 2000
Australia
Tel: +61 2 9264 8884

Dennis Miralis
dm@ngm.com.au

Phillip Gibson
pg@ngm.com.au

www.ngm.com.au

The Asia-Pacific Investigations Review 2021 contains insight and thought leadership from 25 pre-eminent practitioners from the region. Across nine chapters, spanning around 100 pages, it provides an invaluable retrospective and primer.

Together, these contributors capture and interpret the most substantial recent international investigations developments of the past year, with footnotes and relevant statistics. They provide valuable background to help you get up to speed quickly on the essentials of a particular topic. This edition covers Australia, China, Hong Kong, India and Singapore in jurisdictional overviews. It also looks at the impact of AI, data privacy, forensic accounting and law enforcement in multi-jurisdictional investigations.